

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

This chapter consists of two parts. The first one is the conclusion of the aims presented in the previous chapter. The second one is some suggestions to the study under report.

5.1 Conclusion

This study explored the use of the Jakarta dialects spoken by the girl students of SMU 2 Surabaya and the reasons underlying the use of this dialect.

With the theories of language variety, language and dialect and the Jakarta dialect, the writer recorded ten conversations data using a small tape recorder and a field note. These data were transcribed and analysed based on the answers of the questionnaires given to the subjects. These data were then observed on the basis of the parameters.

The writer concluded that Jakarta dialect is proved as one of dialects in Indonesia that influences Bahasa Indonesia (Indonesian) which it used as a means of communication by the teenagers, especially the female students in Surabaya as the subjects under this study. It also shows us the aspects of using this dialect in the communication which shows the intimacy and the identity that the subjects want.

5.2 Suggestions

The writer conducted his research by taking his subject at SMU 2 Surabaya only. Surely, it can not represent all the SMU female students in Surabaya and get deeper statements of using the Jakarta dialect relating to the aspects that a person will have . Therefore, the writer suggests that the next analyst who might also have a research on the use of the Jakarta dialect in Surabaya spoken by the SMU female students, to make a wider scope.

The writer, in this research, discussed the main reasons for the use of the Jakarta dialect by the SMU female students in Surabaya based on their statements. Anyway, he also compared his study with the one done by Yayah B. Lumintintang. The writer suggests the next researchers to have also the historical background in their study.
